Recommendations

• Focus coaching and pipeline review on agents with below-overall win rates and meaningful closed volume, such as Lajuana Vencill, Markita Hansen, Donn Cantrell, and Gladys Colclough, while accounting for sample-size differences.

• Investigate product conversion differences: MG Special and GTX Plus Pro have the highest product win rates, while MG Advanced is lowest among the larger products; review qualification and sales enablement for lower-converting products.

• Treat GTK 500 conclusions cautiously because it has only 40 opportunities and 25 closed deals in the supplied data.

• Monitor the quarterly pattern: Q1 2017 had an 82.071% win rate on 647 closed deals, while Q2–Q4 win rates were approximately 60%–62%, and 2017-Q4 new opportunities fell 57.942% QoQ by engage quarter.

• Use the $3,360,822 open-pipeline potential only as an estimated list-price figure, not as a probability-weighted forecast, and resolve the 333 unpriced open opportunities before drawing pipeline conclusions.

• Prioritize top accounts Kan-code, Konex, Condax, Cheers, and Hottechi for retention and expansion, given their recorded won revenue.

• Build sector playbooks around retail for largest won revenue and marketing for highest listed win rate, while reviewing finance where the listed win rate is lowest.

• Address data-quality gaps, especially the 500 invalid engage dates, to improve confidence in engagement-quarter and opportunity-source reporting.
